List & Label 21 Reporting Tool Out This Fall Report Designer Upgraded with Great New Features for End Users

Constance, Germany, 2015-08-26 – Version 21 of the List & Label reporting tool will soon be released. According to the manufacturer combit, it will be available by the end of October. In particular, the report designer, which software developers can distribute with their own application without additional licensing fees, has received a whole slew of new features and improvements. "Nested tables have been at the top of the list for many clients, and we are proud to be able to offer this new feature now," says Jochen Bartlau, Head of Development List & Label and Managing Director at combit. "The new possibilities offered by the designer will definitely wow the customers of software developers who use List & Label!" assures Bartlau. New features include intuitive conditional formatting and greatly improved error handling. Existing data providers have also been revamped, and new providers have been developed for SharePoint, Oracle, Remote Data, and Cassandra. Native aggregate functions at the database level now allow for significantly faster calculations, ZUGFeRD is now also directly supported, and PDF exports have also been significantly improved. Web developers benefit from a new WebDesigner and a revamped HTML5 viewer. combit's development blog has detailed information on these:
